Engaged Inquiry Workshop for Curious Parents, Students, and Educators

On Nov. 23, 2013,

9:30am – 12:30pm

Join Jason Taylor, program coordinator of Philosophy for Children Alberta and instructor with the University of Alberta's Philosophy Department, for an innovative workshop on engaged inquiry as inspired by storybooks!

Engaged inquiry employs structured, open-ended dialogue and philosophical reflection as a proven, effective way to develop critical, collaborative, and communication skills.

In this workshop, you will be introduced to several techniques for generating engaged inquiry in and beyond classrooms, with a special focus on exploring numerous storybooks as the stimulus for engaged inquiry in the classroom.

Light refreshments will be provided.

Location: Edmonton Clinic Health Academy (ECHA), 11405 - 87th Avenue

Room: 1 - 498
Cost: $35 (Students free)

Discover how the benefits of critical inquiry be brought into your classroom, after-school program, or kitchen table by attending a workshop to:

- Learn about the Philosophy for Children Program from experienced facilitators

- Meet the staff and volunteers at P4C Alberta who can help you introduce philosophy in your classroom

- Gain hands-on experience with sample exercises and a program walk-through

- Network with others interested in philosophy in the classroom

Register by completing the attached form and returning it to us before the registration closing date.

Registration closes Wednesday, Nov. 20 at 4 PM.
